CHARLES-TOWN, Sept. 2.

YEſterday the General Aſſembly of this ſtate met here, purſuant to adjournment.

Mr. Nicholas Low at South Quay in Virginia, writes to a friend here, under date of the 9th Aug. viz. "Our advices from the Northward promiſe "the ſpeedy poſſeſſion of New-York. General "Waſhington having ſummoned Clinton to ſur- "render the city, or abide the conſequences of "a bombardment. Count d'Eſtaing and the Ar- "mament under him, have taken eighty prizes.— The ſame Gentleman writes to another friend, of the ſame date, viz. "There is a great deal of "news, of which Captain Pelton will give you "the particulars. I entertain not the leaſt doubt "of the truth of it, and am fully of opinion, that "New-York is this day ours. Clinton and his "army were ſo ſituated, they could not eſcape." —Theſe letters came laſt Friday; but the news has not been confirmed, or contradicted, from any quarter ſince.—— Capt. Pelton ſeems to have been more attentive to the buſineſs of his employers, than to the gaining of intelligence.

Capt. Reibaux, who arrived here laſt Friday from Cadiz, left that port the 5th of July. He confirms the account we ſome time ſince had, of the arrival of the fleet with the treaſure on the 3d of May—and adds, that the Spaniſh ſquadron there conſiſted, when he came away, of 35 ſail.

By two veſſels from Hiſpaniola, we have a confirmation of the news, that all the Britiſh ſhips of war upon the Jamaica ſtation had been called in. And alſo this piece of intelligence, viz. That the Count d'Argout had lately received ſome diſpatches by a frigate from France, one of which was not to be opened till a frigate from Count d'Eſtaign's ſquadron ſhould appear and make a certain ſignal off Porta u Prince

By a ſloop from Martinique, we learn, that the troops brought thither the two laſt years from France, were under orders to hold themſelves in conſtant readineſs to embark, at two hours notice. The ſame is ſaid of the regular troops on Hiſpaniol, The number on both iſlands are ſaid to be 25,000 men.

There are ſome who begin to doubt, whether any of the grand fleet at Spithead have proceeded to New York: They rather think, Admirals Biron, and Hyde Parker may be gone to Gibraltar; or one of them to Gibraltar, and the other, with Commodore Evans, either for Halifax or Jamaica.

Captain Widger of the ſcooner Hannah of this Port, who was taken on the 9th inſtant, by the Revenge privateer of Jamaica, Capt. Atkinſon, was, within half an hour after being taken, put aſhore with his crew at Long-Bay, without being plundered, and arrived in town laſt Wedneſday. He ſays, the privateer boarded him, and had only 19 hands.

The following is a liſt of the Britiſh Fleet at Spithead, reviewed by the King on the 7th of May; but we will not preſume to ſay they were manned.

The following particulars of the Count d'Eſtaing and his ſquadron have been communicated to us in letters, viz. That as ſoon as he took the command of the fleet, he ordered that the uſe of all ſumptuous or unneceſſary furniture ſhould be diſuſed, had all the cabbins in his ſhip knocked down, and a hammock for himſelf ſlung between two guns; that he lives in the ſame manner as the ſeamen: That there are on board each ſhip of his ſquadron, at leaſt four old captains of merchantmen, who had never ſerved in the navy, or who, having ſerved therein in inferior ſtations, had quitted the ſervice as invalids or otherwiſe; from among whom vacancies are to be filled up, ſtrict regard being had to merit; And that his ſquadron is the beſt manned and beſt officered of any that ever put to ſea from France

According to advices from Cadiz of the 1ſt of May, the Spaniſh ſquadron in that bay, under the command of Don Lewis de Cordova, with Brigadier Don Juan de Thomaſo, and Chef d'Eſcadre Don Michel Gaſton under him, was then ready to put to ſea on the firſt notice, and conſiſted of 29 ſhips of the line, 6 frigates, 2 hoſpital ſhips, 2 fire ſhips and a conſiderable number of ſloop ſhips and victuallers: That they were in a manner laden with all kinds of military ſtores, and had 15 months proviſion on board.—Thoſe who doubt, whether Spain is diſpoſed to take an active part in favour of theſe United States, need only read the following extract of a letter, of which Mr. Townſend took particular notice, in a ſpeech of his on the 5th of May, in the Houſe of Commons:

Extract of a Letter from an Officer on board his Britannic Majeſty's ſhip the Monarque, Joſeph Rowley, Eſq; commander, juſt returned from a cruize to Spithead.

"Thank God! we are once more returned to an Engliſh port. After ſo tireſome a cruize I hoped to have ſpent at leaſt a few days with my friends in London; but political Reaſons deprive me of that pleaſure, no one is allowed to quit the ſhip, except Mr. —— who carries the Captain's letters to the admiralty: But, as I am not forbid the uſe of pen, ink, and paper, I muſt content myſelf with ſending the ſubſtance of what I purpoſed to have related myſelf. ——— Cadiz was the laſt foreign Port we anchored in, were we have been treated in a manner ſcarce to be credited, tho' government will receive from us and others proofs ſufficient to induce it to reſent the inſult offered to a King's ſhip. We entered the port of Cadiz on Sunday afternoon, the Captain according to cuſtom, immediately ſent the boat aſhore to ask what the Spaniards call product; it could not be obtained. A ſecond, third, and fourth boat were ſent on the ſame errand.——no anſwer was given: At length a memorial was ſent to the commandant couched in preſſing terms—no anſwer ſtill. It ſeemed as if the Spaniards had determined to hear nothing from us. In the mean time (the wind having detained us ſeven days in that ſituation) we had the mortification to ſee the uſual honours returned to two Dutch frigates; and the American privateer Revenge, commanded by Cunningham, come in, as it were in triumph, with his thirteen ſtripes diſplayed; he ſaluted the Spaniſh admiral, his ſalute was returned, and he inſtantly obtained product. We ſaw the Spaniards eagerly carry on board wood, water, fruit and freſh proviſion. All this paſſed in our view, for the veſſel was at anchor under our ſtern. There are at Cadiz 22 ſhips of the line, beſides frigates and chebecks; the former as fine veſſels as ever were ſeen at ſea; they ſeem completely equipped, and are as deep in the water as if they had every thing on board ready to proceed to ſea on the firſt notice. We found 12 other veſſels here bearing American colours; and 6 more ſhips of the line were expected to join the fleet from Ferrol. We received this information from the Captain of one of the Dutch frigates, who has behaved to us with the ſtricteſt Propriety. We have been happy, on our arrival at Spithead, to ſee ſo fine a fleet ready to chaſtize the inſolence of our natural enemies, &c."

There is a law of this State in force, impoſing a penalty on every maſter or other perſon having charge of any ſhip or veſſel uſing the ſeas, that ſhall be found riding, moored or anchored, at any of the wharves, or bridges near Charleſtown, or within 100 fathoms thereof, between the then laſt day of July, now 10th of Auguſt and then 15th, now 25th of September in every year, except to unload, for which they are allowed a convenient time, not exceeding ten days.— For want of due attention to this law, had the gale on the 10th ult. veered more to the Eaſtward, every veſſel in the harbour muſt inevitably have been loſt.

HOUSE of COMMONS, April 9.

Mr. David Hartley, in a Committee of Enquiry, ſhewed the fatal conſequences ariſen to this country from the American war; depts accumulated; trade ruined; publick credit ſunk; private property deſtroyed; the minds of the people alienated from Government; and the moſt extravagant expenditure of public money. Theſe were the misfortunes which the ignorance, folly, and weak policy of adminiſtration had entailed upon their country. He wiſhed, that the public might be made acquainted with the great Obligations they were under to the miniſtry for theſe benefits procured to the empire. To that end he made a ſtring of reſolutions which tended to point out the acts of Adminiſtration in a conſpicuous manner: Among others he made the following motions.

That upwards of Thirty Millions had been expended in the American war.

That navagation and trade had been injured and interrupted.

And that if the American war was at an end we ſhould be able to defend ourſelves againſt a foreign enemy. Mr. Hartley was near two hours on his legs.

Lord North, among others, oppoſed the propoſed reſolutions; he anſwered ſummarily, Mr. Hartley's arguments; but as he ſaw the debate was likely to take up a great deal of time, though his Lordſhip had, as he thought, ſatisfactorily replied to every part of Mr. Hartley's ſpeech, he was reſolved to get rid of the reſolutions in a ſhort way: His Lordſhip therefore moved that the chairman ſhould leave the chair; and after ſome oppoſition, carried his point; and conſequently diſpoſed of Mr. Hartley's motion to his ſatisfaction.
